Red line is league average

Jalen Hurts is a rushing QB

A higher-than-average share of Jalen Hurts' points have come via rushing yards and rushing touchdowns, and a lower-than-average share of his points have come via passing yards and passing touchdowns.

You may not be able to count on Hurts scoring this many rushing touchdowns every year, especially as coaches, offensive strategy, and players change over time.

Jalen Hurts: high-risk, high-reward

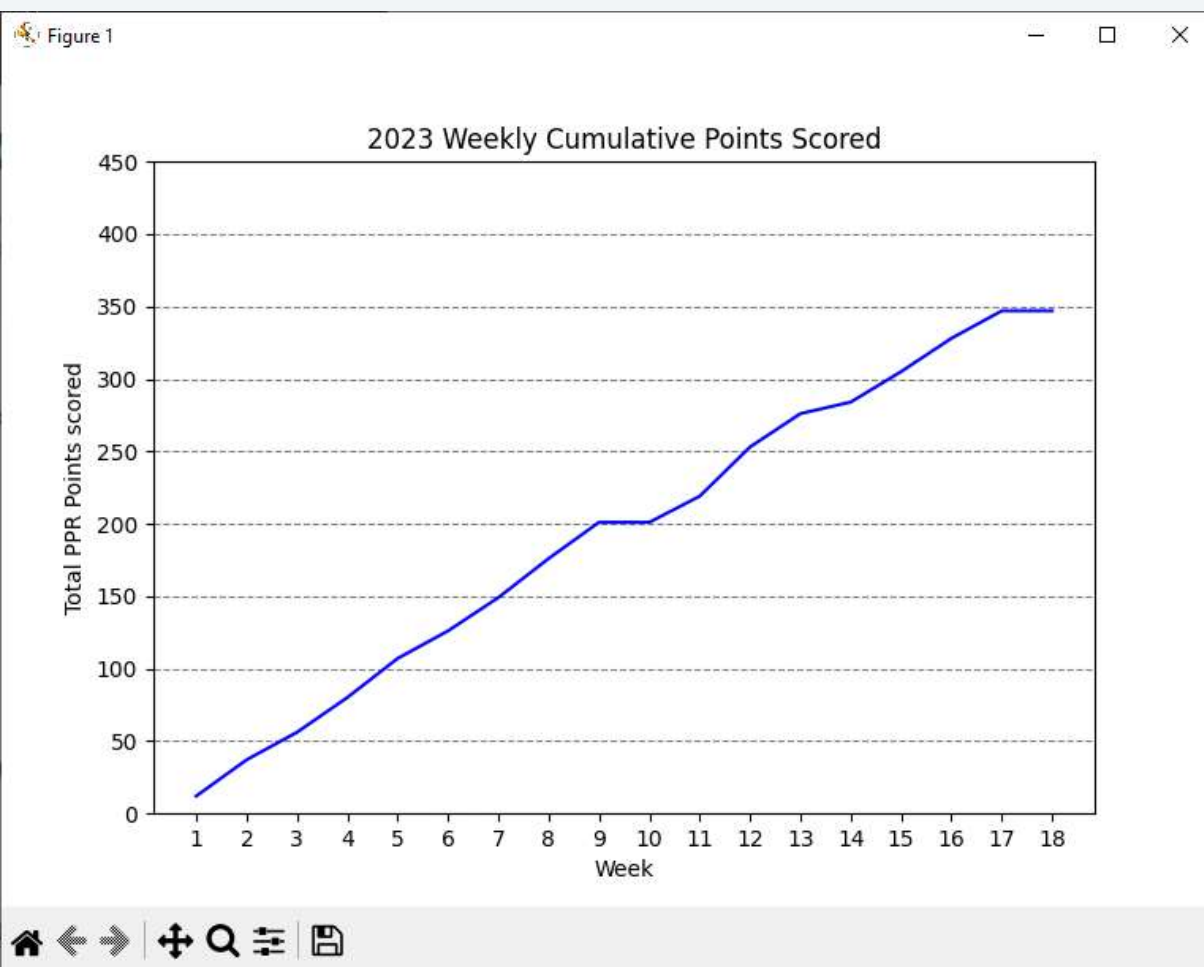

Jalen Hurts scored significantly above the league average in points per game in 2023, averaging over 20pts per game vs the league average of just under 13.

However, he was also below the league average in consistency, with a StDev of about 7.5 vs the league average of about 6.5. This means he was more up-and-down than the average QB in 2023. He may score very high one week, but very low the next.
